

Requirement for Third-Party Injury Victims to Retain Legal Representation

As part of our ongoing commitment to ensuring fair and equitable outcomes for all parties involved in injury claims, we implement a policy that requires third-party injury victims to retain legal representation before we can engage in any treatment regarding their claims.

This decision was made after careful consideration and consultation with legal experts. Third Party doesn't always follow through with paying the accrued medical bills and oftentimes the injured party is left responsible for their care. An attorney assures that both the provider and injured party are fully protected. This allows us and the injured to focus on feeling well again rather than battling an insurance company that doesn't have anyone's best interest but their own. We believe that legal representation provides crucial protection for the rights and interests of the injured party as well as our clinic, helping to navigate the complexities of the claims process and ensuring that all legal aspects are adequately addressed. By requiring legal representation, we aim to streamline communications, facilitate transparent negotiations, and uphold the highest standards of ethical practice in our interactions with all parties involved.

Should you require assistance in finding suitable legal representation, please do not hesitate to ask the front desk staff.
